ter county on 3½ mills and therefore the fund appropriated by the State, it seems to me, should be appropriated in such a manner that the sparsely populated districts would be properly aided.

Does the children in the west lay districts receive more than those in the east districts? Has not the country as good a right to have as good schools and teachers as the boys of the richer cities and towns? Is it that our country districts are being depopulated? Is advancing township high schools governing the State? The tendency of this is to aggravate the disposition of citizens to move from the country into the towns. The State should be all in the power to make the country districts more attractive and more profitable, and to make the State more united.

One of its advantages or conveniences.

Gentlemen, does it not strike you that there is something wrong? Should this large appropriation be so largely diverted to the larger cities like Philadelphia, Pittsburg, etc., while the country districts are taxed so heavily for such inadequate facilities?

How shall we distribute this appropriation? I want to quote you what Dr. Schaeffer says in his report of 1897 and I think it is also evident from a close scrutiny of the School Journals for the year, that he also realizes that there is some injustice in this matter but like many of the rest of us, does not seem to be able to formulate a perfect method of distribution. He says: "Most of the states distribute their the masses of unskilled labor and live in villages lacking the conveniences of modern life. If those who remain on the farm are well educated they will lead a richer and fuller life and buy more of that which the city makes. Imports and sells. Every man who has a financial interest in all has a financial interest in the efficiency of the country school.

Since this plan of distribution was adopted we have had additional burdens placed upon us; the compulsory law and the minimum salary, all of which are steps in the right direction.

that. That question would have satisfied by the law of supply and demand. Last year we had considerable difficulty in filling our schools with competent teachers on account of the low rates of salaries. We have had more resignations during the past few years than ever before simply because other fields of occupation were offering paying very much additional Salary. The time is rapidly coming when if we desire to have teachers of ability we will have to largely increase the present rate of salary. The school tax now is the heaviest of any town and in countries like his we can't escape from the largely increased expense on this account. The question is, how are we to meet these future demands? I have already

The tax rate in the city of Philadelphia in 1902 was eighteen and one-half mills and this covered the total expense of a city government, including police, fire, streets, lighting, water, school, and other things, in fact, connected with the government of a city. As far as the actual performance in the district is concerned, the number of schools, number of months taught and actual cost of operating. If such a plan had been in force in 1902 Bedford county would have been in a large majority of cases are simply cases of worklessness from incompotent and inefficient work on the part of the assessors and the distribution would be based upon the actual performance in the district. As far as the number of schools, number of months taught and actual cost of operating. If such a plan had been in force in 1902 Bedford county would have been

When mothers are worried because the children do not gain strength and flesh we say give them Scott's Emulsion.

It is like the penny in the milk because it works and because there is something astonishing about it.

Scott's Emulsion is simply a milk of pure cod liver oil with some hypophosphites especially prepared for delicate stomachs.

Children take it naturally because they like the taste and the remedy takes just as naturally to the children because it is so perfectly adapted to their wants.

For all weak and pale and thin children Scott's Emulsion is the most satisfactory treatment.

We will send you the penny, i. e., a sample free.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

Physical Training of Our Children

CHRISTINE T. HERRICK

of Symmetrical Development.—How This May Be Brought About.

Copyright, 1904, by Christine Terhune Herrick.

A healthy, well developed body is the best gift a child can receive. When this gift is not meant to cost any action upon the value of the training, or to depreciate the benefits thorough education. But these of comparatively small value if the child is sickly. I do not forget that when as Prescott, Parkman, Her- Spencer and a long list of other students accomplished their works in spite of painful and often physical disability. They had no excuse to deliver to the world and compelled their bodies to yield to the mind. But they were exceptional. As a rule, the mind is more or less in bondage to the body. If the boy or woman is to make the best of her mental equipment, the development of his sons and daughters feels that it is perhaps well to look into this matter of bicycling in some other light than that of an amusement.

To get the full benefit from bicycling for a growing boy or girl the wheel should not be bought at random. At one time the acquisition of a bicycle sank to pretty much the same standing as one of the "given away-with-a-pound-of-tea" prizes. The market was flooded with cheap wheels and the getting of one was a sort of catch-as-catch-can business. But we have changed all that. Now, when a boy or a girl is to have a wheel it is selected to last. What will do for one will not answer for another and the makers of wheels have learned that the worst service they can do their products is to send out one that is not entirely satisfactory. No longer can one buy a bicycle from a responsible firm on the hit-or-miss plan.

Here runs one will rise with a tale of how he bought a wheel for his boy and it did not last him any length of time at all. "He gave it no more wear than I gave mine, but it was so poorly built that it went to pieces before he had had it a month. That cured me of high priced wheels! Get a boy a cheap one and let him use that up and then get him another."

That principle may have applied never so early as eight months of age, and the child must be trained constantly and morally, because the work is started when the muscles are in the cradle. The habits of obedience may not be pre-natal, but should be formed so soon after birth as to become like nature to the child. Perhaps it may seem absurd to demand as much for the child's body—as we do not know what we might make of it if we had given it intelligent attention. Even so, the child must be trained, and the muscles must lie in unnatural postures; that the eyes must be strained; that the back must be kept straight, not exerted to subside, that the arms must be rubbed and flexed if they do not develop as they should. The child must not be allowed to sit

This is done while the baby is a thing, but what is done in the of intelligent physical guidance—he or she—is able to go about make a way through the world? At this point is reached the children are allowed to look out for themselves. They may be encouraged to active exercise, though, indeed, are generally leads them to do this: the parents are too few who direct exercise their children take and for themselves that the youngsters about it in the right way. They come with other boys and go learn other feel that they have done the sole duty of parents when they provide the means for these outdoor entertainments. It seldom occurs to them to make sure that they have secured for the children's physical activities—much less to see that the boy to develop his body will be of no use to the girl in the improvement of hers. I often question if the girl does not perhaps need it more even than the boy. While she is still a child ing place all over the country. There was a time when it was a fad, like most fads, it was abused. There was never a good thing yet that of a young girl who had been brought up by her father, a gentleman, and her mother, a gentlewoman; one wishes a young girl to become.

Of course, there is such a thing as overdoing the outdoor life and the physical side, just as there is a possibility of excess on the other side. But the evenly balanced man or woman must have plenty of both sorts of training. There has never yet been found a better combination than

But, not for the children. Blunt children, they promptly proceeded to ahead and do as they pleased, with one objection of having a good time. They may have had a few lessons in riding, but it is quite as likely as not that it was not from an instructor but from a playmate. Sure of it from the "born rider" variety had no doubt.

their wheels had not been selected properly) and were not adapted to their weight or their length of limb. If their wheels did not run easily—and these days the bicycle from what it is—therefore proposition from rather it is today—they took it as a matter of the wheels and proceeded to strain themselves instead of developing their muscles. They evolved for themselves what they thought the best of the wheels and a shop as a horse of "monkey's." Or they became enthusiastic riding and went on long runs, and themselves to make or to break a record among their companions. Therefore the parents told complacently of the exploits of their children and never seemed to think that there might be harm doing. In point of fact men and women were not infrequently led into

As a natural acquisition there came a trapeze and the bicycle for a time was neglected.

Despite the pressing of the fad, however, there has been from the outset a large number of people who believe in the bicycle and thought it had other uses than a mere means of getting about the country and riding to and from work. Their faith has been justified by the healthy recreation which it affords and the enjoyment that has been helped on by the sensible utterances of physicians on the subject. When one well known doctor says, "I have often given my bicycling the preference as a mode of exercise above horseback riding and boating; with an early start in childhood it might take the place of gymnastics through life"—the parent who has thought seriously of the physical
